Join the RISE program. There's still time to register for Retirees in Service to the Environment (RISE) an environmental stewardship program combining education and an opportunity for hands-on participation in an environmental project in our community. The program begins May 4, and registration may be extended a week if there is interest.

"Spring is a perfect time to get involved in a meaningful activity, to have fun and meet people, and to learn about our environment," said Program Director Joe Greeley. "At a time when many of our friends are heading North, the RISE program is an opportunity to explore new opportunities in our community.

RISE program participants will receive 30 hours of training, meeting Tuesday mornings for eight-weeks at such exciting places as Mote Marine, Oscar Scherer State Park, Save Our Seabirds, Historic Spanish Point and other beautiful locations in Sarasota.

Experts on the issues most important to our environment in Sarasota will provide lectures throughout the program. Following the conclusion of the formal section of the training program the class will take part in an important environmental stewardship project.

The class is forming now with the first session scheduled for the first week of May. There will be a onetime course material charge of $45 for participants.
