Weekly Spiritual Reflection from the Early Brothers of St. Joseph

One can discover in Algeria a place called The Sacred Woods. Peace, calm, silence reign in this impenetrable place under the burning rays of the day star. It's there or in our solitary walks we love to invoke the Queen of Angels and Men for the prosperity of our Congregation, the preservation of him whom Divine Providence has chosen to be the regenerator of what is miraculously preserved in the midst of perils and under the most overwhelming odds. (Brother Eulogius Boisard 5/16/1841)

Our Lady of Guadalupe

A painting of Our Lady of Guadalupe located on a tree along the path around Saint Joseph Lake, on the campus of Notre Dame University, Indiana, has been recently renewed.

What is the history behind this tree painting?

Holy Cross Roads Writings for the Journey

Seeing is Believing

Dear Associates and Friends,

Who has ever seen God? We can say “Not I.” Yet we can all see God in the things and persons that God has made. The main character in the musical Les Misérables sings, “To love another person is to see the face of God.”

When we can let down our guard and the inner talk that is going on inside of us, and really take in what we are looking at, we are able to go past the layers of projections that we have placed on a person, a creature or a thing. We see the inner light, and, in that light, we are seeing God. Then it is not hard to believe with faith in God who is creator and the source of our seeing, the inner beauty and goodness of things. “A rose is a rose is a rose,” the poet says. Having time and space to really see, we see the inner source of light and life. Seeing is believing.

- Do you take time to experience the inner beauty of things?
- If so, what is your response?
- Did your experience lead you to an experience of God? Could it have?

O God, do not let me miss the beauty that is all around me, which makes real your presence in my life.
